For several years, I have provided computer support to business professionals, home makers, retired folks in-person and online through remote software. Students have special tutors that train for passing tests. I am not that kind of tutor. I chose to work with adults because they need usually need to meet specific goals or build computer skills. It's fun to help people with their computers and other equipment to learn a bit more, use new technology at their own pace.

When I am not giving support in person or online, I turn to website ads or design elements, or photo/graphic projects. Please check out my website for details and samples

I hope there is something I can do for you today - Samantha Conway, a Web Wench
